Kaye Oldner Displayed in a booklet-style format, these twenty-four postcards are reproductions of advertising cards from the nineteenth century era. To be honest, I had no clue as to who Bella C. Landauer was until finding these cards here and then doing a google search. From what I've read, Bella C. Landauer was a collector of printed ephemera. Some of her collections included including lottery tickets, posters, sheet music, cameo cards, and matchbooks and I agree with the description above. These nostalgic cards capture the charm of that century. I'm not a collector though. A couple times a month, maybe more, I'll send a book to a friend and like to include a note. Post cards are a neat way of doing just that. One last thing I want to add is these cards have to be torn out of a book, leaving a perforated edge on three sides of each card. If that's not problem or you don't mind trimming the edges, then this is a winner. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Beautiful postcard reproductions By ~Nightshadow~ If you like Victorian ephemera, this is the book of postcards you should buy. A very high quality product like most of the offerings from Dover. The postcards are beautiful and interesting.

From the Bella C. Landauer Collection of the New York Historical Society, 24 authentic 19th-century advertising cards to save or send. Long cherished as collectors' items, these nostalgic cards capture the charm of a vanished era.
