Mary Martin : Baltimore: A History in Postcards (Schiffer Book for Collectors) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Baltimore: A History in Postcards (Schiffer Book for Collectors):

Another great postcard collection!By Man of SteelBaltimore - A History in Postcards is another installment in a long line of postcard books from Schiffer and postcard diva Mary Martin. It is composed in the manner of many similar books by the same author and publisher (in all fairness Mary had a co-author on this one, Nathaniel Wolfgang-Price). It is standard length at 128 pages and includes 257 different postcards, mostly in color. As is normal with this series of books, the text is limited; pricing information related to each postcard is included for the benefit of the would-be collector. The postcard reproduction is superb, even when the cards are enlarged beyond actual size. The number of topics covered is large, reflecting the number and variety of postcards made over the years of Baltimore subjects. And, of course, there are no modern chrome-type cards included; the postcards shown are all from the first half of the 20th century. This book is only one of Mary Martin's offerings, and for the collector her postcard shop in Havre de Grace, MD, is a kind of Mecca. Mary also sponsors several annual postcard shows in various locations.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy CustomerNice book thanks

Called the "Charm City" and "The Best City in America" Baltimore is a city that has a great deal to offer visitors. The port of call for a dozen steamer lines and the starting point of one of the oldest railroads in the United States, Baltimore was wide open to the country and the country came right in. Whether it was for business or for pleasure visitors came to Baltimore in droves. See Fort McHenry where Francis Scott Key penned the words to "The Star Spangled Banner," crack open a crab in the Inner Harbor, take a peek at the burial place of Edgar Allan Poe, or spend the day at Pimlico Park. Over 200 vintage black and white and hand tinted postcards showcase some of the sights that have made Baltimore famous the world over. Enjoy the sites, the sounds, and the scenery and "Welcome to Bawlmore, Hon!"
